

Author Guidelines

Summary

- Standard articles comprise three printed pages.
- Articles generally do not mention commercial products or their manufacturers.
- All articles are subject to peer review. Suggested edits are submitted to the author for approval.

General

Review articles and project reports are published to provide knowledge in the field of digital pathology and to facilitate its establishment in the pathology laboratory. Authors are usually invited by the editorial office.

Scope and subject matter are agreed with the author in advance. Standard is three printed pages with a total of 8,000 to 10,000 characters (incl. spaces) as well as literature citations (sorted by occurrence in the text) (first author et al., title. Journal Year. Issue: SS-SS.) plus 2 to 3 illustrative elements (tables, graphs, figures).

After acceptance, the author will receive an author's agreement from the publisher for signature. The editorial board reserves the right to revise or shorten articles, make title suggestions, and provide subheadings. All editorial proposals are submitted to the author for acceptance or rejection. Before going to press, the author will receive a proof for approval.

Manuscript editing

For the linguistic interpretation, internal publishing guidelines apply (for example, active instead of passive voice, preference for verbal instead of noun expressions), which the author does not have to observe in detail, this part of the editorial support.

Headings and subheadings should be kept concise and to the point (one line each). Abbreviations should be explained the first time they appear in the text. Wherever possible, measured values are given in SI units; for information on active ingredients, the INN (International Nonproprietary Names) applies with priority.

Conflicts of interest must be declared with the manuscript submission. A conflict of interest exists if there are connections with a company (e.g., consulting or expert activities, lecture fees, assumption of travel expenses, etc.) whose product is mentioned in the article, or a company that markets a competing product. The preparation of the topic must be independent and the presentation of the content must be kept vendor-neutral.

Illustrations/tables

Please supply all images as separate files, preferably in JPG, PNG, BMP or (print) PDF file formats with a resolution of 300 dpi. Our graphics department will also create print-ready illustrations based on templates (for example, PowerPoint files) in consultation with the author. Care must be taken to ensure that the author owns all rights to original illustrations submitted.

Figures and tables may be placed in the author's preferred locations in the text; however, the publisher reserves the right to choose a different placement if the typesetting requires it. All legends should be self-explanatory.

Author and publishing rights

Unless expressly stated otherwise when the manuscript is submitted, the publisher acquires all rights to the contribution, including multiple use in other media owned by the publisher (magazines, website, newsletter, etc.), as well as for reproduction or offprint. Illustrations also become the property of the publisher upon printing. The author receives a PDF of his contribution and is entitled to redistribute this document in print and on the internet, as long as the source is clearly legible in the footer. Linking from the author's website to the Trillium archive is explicitly welcome.

Manuscript submission

As a rule, the manuscript should be submitted to the publisher twelve weeks before publication of the issue. The exact deadline will be agreed between the author and the editor. If possible, please send your contribution by e-mail as a Word file to:
